Colman on Local Screen Wednesday

"Cynara" Includes New Leading Lady, Phyllis Barry

Ronald Colman denies that he is a woman-hater. He likes women and women like him. Somewhere in the mysterious hinterland of rumor and gossip and publicity there was germinated the report that the star of the picturized "Cynara" at the Saenger Wednesday and Thursday is shy.

The failure of his one marriage had not made film cynical toward all marriage. He believes most decidedly that marriage is an ideal state. But because he is an Englishman, because he is a gentleman and because he is discreet rumor runs rampant that Mr. Colman shies of women.

On the screen, he continues to be a romantic lover, robust adventurer and polished cosmopolite. Off the screen, he remains a popular bachelor, charming, sincere and circumspect.

Of the persons published, "Cynara" is one the best known. Its poignant refrain, reflecting a man's inability to be spiritually untrue to the great love of his life, exactly fits the situation of "Cynara," which gives new angles on the question of what faithful love really is.

Phyllis Barry is the "Cynara" of the picture. She is a newcomer to the screen. Kay Francis has the role of the wife. Others in the cast are Henry Stephenson, [Paul Porcasi] and Vivi Tattersall.

Cotton, Stocks and Mills Leap Forward

Cotton Up $1.35 Bale for New High of 8.64—Mills Sold Out

NEW YORK—(AP)—Buoyed by news of further business gains, the leading financial markets resumed their advance Wednesday, stocks rallying from $1 to $5 a share, and commodities were higher.

From the New York textile markets come reports of brisk business and stronger prices.

The demand embraced a wide range of cotton cloths, including percales, sheeting and gray goods. Some mills were said to be sold out for nearby deliveries and refused to accept orders even at the better quotations.

Stock market traders took particular interest in the low-priced industrial issues, though all divisions were strong.

Stocks Close on High

Prices jumped at the opening, reacted slightly around noon, and then improved smartly during the last half hour, when volume increased and final prices were generally the day's highest.

Sales approximated 4 million shares.

New York cotton finished $1.20 to $1.45 a bale higher.

The stock ticker did not print the final quotation until 10 minutes after closing time, 3 o'clock E. S. T. (2 o'clock Hope).

Cotton Closes 8.64

Cotton established a new "high" for the year Wednesday when July contracts rose $1.35 a bale, closing at $8.64-5, according to advices to Henry Watkins & Son, Hope.

The close was up 27 points from the previous day's finish.

Wednesday's close of 8.64 compared with the best previous top of 8.59, reported last Saturday.

Delinquent List Is Test for County Salary Act 1933

Legislature's Violation of Local Act Prohibition Is Cited

LAST POINT OF BILL

Anticipated That Salary Features Are Certain to Be Thrown Out

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The question of whether the legislature had the right to legislate on a matter held previously to be "purely a local matter" has been raised in the appeal of a test case to determine whether the provision of the county salary act of 1933 abolishing publication of the delinquent tax list is valid.

This case, now under submission in the supreme court for a possible decision next Monday, was appealed by W. F. Matthews, a Union county taxpayer, who sought unsuccessfully, in the lower court to enjoin County Clerk Clyde E. Byrd from preparing the delinquent tax list for publication. In the original trial, the chancellor held the provision to be unconstitutional.

The provision in question was tacked on to the county salary act as an amendment during the recent legislative session.

Mr. Matthews' counsel contends the provision does not conflict with the general purpose of the entire act, since its aim was to reduce the expenses of county government and of the taxpayers.

Was Local Legislation?

But Mr. Byrd's counsel in briefs argued the legislature had no right to legislate on county salary matters, since the supreme court in deciding the validity of the Union county initiated salary act of last November, said the fixing of the salaries of county officers "is purely a local matter, and is not of interest to persons except the taxpayers in the particular county where the law is enacted. The fixing of salaries and compensation to be paid county officers is of peculiar interest to the taxpayers of the county, and it was legislation of this kind the people intended to provide by the initiative and referendum amendment). No local matter could be more important to them."

Mr. Matthews' counsel contends the section of the act abolishing publication of the delinquent tax list should stand, even though the remainder of the act—fixing the salaries of county officers—should be held invalid as local legislation.

"We submit," said the brief for Mr. Byrd, that when Section 3 (giving salaries) fails by reason of the court's act of the act consistent with the title and purpose of the original bill is gone. Should the appellants' (Mr. Matthews) position be sustained it would be an instance of the tail performing the office of the watch dog after the dog had been removed. We would then have an act radically changing the method of giving notice to the world and to individual owners of real estate when taxes on land were delinquent and the land to be offered for sale for such taxes. And this change would have been made under the legislative notice of "A Bill for an Act To Be Entitled, An Act to Fix the Compensation of County Officers."

Union and Phillips counties last fall passe dinitiated acts lowering salaries and initiated acts lowering salaries during the legislative session, their representatives obtained an agreement from the house that not more than 65 votes would be cast for the statewide salary act. This was done to prevent the repeal of their locally initiated acts under the theory that a two-thirds vote of the legislature may repeal an initiated act.

Senate Agrees to Cut Guarantee of Costs; Fight Ends

Upper Chamber Comes to Terms With House, Completing Action

OPPOSE RAIL BILL

Labor Tells Its Side of Story to Committee of Senate

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Norris-Simpson cost-production-guarantee amendment, to which the administration objected, was stricken from the farm bill by the senate Wednesday, and the bill was sent to President Roosevelt for signature.

The farm bill includes a section which gives the president power to expand the currency, and is better known as the "inflation bill."

The cost-production-guarantee provision, which was opposed by Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture, came out as the senate yielded to house insistence that it be removed, the house having stricken it out the day before.

This, together with an earlier vote of 52 to 28 approving the report of senate and house conferees who had agreed on every section except the cost-production plan, automatically sent the bill to the president.

Labor Fights Rail Plan

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A contention that the "administration's railroad measure would put hundreds of railroad employes out of work and retard economic recovery was laid before the senate's interstate commerce committee Wednesday by Donald R. Richberg, general counsel for the Railway Labor Executives association.

Richberg said the measure would deprive between 50,000 and 300,000 of jobs and would promote policies working harm to the public interest.

"The bill enthrones only an infant czar, with the regency of railroad managers," he declared.

Revolt Put Down

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Last of many disputes arising over the administration's farm-relief inflation bill was all but cleared away Tuesday night and congressional leaders predicted that within 24 hours the measure would be in the hands of President Roosevelt.

Senate action abandoning its controversial guaranteed cost of production amendment, was all that remained for administration leaders to have this done Wednesday.

Roosevelt followers and Republican conservatives had joined in the battle Tuesday to reject the disputed amendment. It was given a push by Huey Long in the Senate last February. The libel action, however, was based on a distribution of letters and other remarks by the senator in leaflets from which he disclaimed.

Whether Long would be held liable to trial for the distribution of the statements, was not defined in Thursday's action.

Dismissal of the libel suit and the attorney's plea of immunity were made despite Long's boast in the senate, as reported by the Congressional Record, that "I do not claim any privilege that you senators have anywhere on earth under God's living sun."

River Threatening to Wash Out Road

U. S. Engineers Are Appealed to in Stuttgart Emergency

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The United States Army Engineers have been asked to take steps to prevent the further caving of banks of the Arkansas river along the Little Rock-Stuttgart highway, which is endangering the highway.

State Director of Highways James R. Rhyne and other engineers, including one from the army district office at Memphis, recently inspected the site which is near the state hospital for insane five miles east of North Little Rock, and came to the conclusion that revetment work was necessary.

The site is along what is properly the old bed of the Arkansas river, but during times of floods, the water returns about a broad bend, undermining the base of a small bluff. Hugh quantities of earth were carried away at this point during the 1927 flood.

Farmer and Wife Held as Poisoners

5 Deaths in Neighborhood Family Traced to Alleged Plot

NEWPORT, Ark. —(AP)— Ransom Crawford, 60-year-old farmer, and his wife, 55, were arrested Wednesday and held under bond on first degree murder indictments charging them with the alleged poisoning of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ballew and their three children last December.

No motive for the alleged poisoning of the Ballew family was advanced by officers.

Ballew sub-rented a farm from Crawford. Five deaths in the Ballew family were first attributed to influenza.

Suspicions of officers, however, were aroused and a chemical analysis of the vital organs was said by officers to have revealed poison, which they said also was found in some food in the house.

Atlantan Named Reserve Governor

Eugene Black Succeeds Eugene Meyer, Hoover Appointee

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Roosevelt Wednesday named Eugene Black, of Atlanta, governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

He succeeds Eugene Meyer, whom Hoover appointee who some time ago placed his resignation in the hands of President Roosevelt, to serve until his successor should be named.

Black is now governor of the Federal Reserve bank at Atlanta.

Avert Jail Break at Arkadelphia

Robert Saddler, Bank Robber, Slugs Druggist in Attempt

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—(AP)—An attempt by Robert Saddler, accused bank robber, and another prisoner to escape from the Clark county jail here was frustrated Wednesday after Saddler had slugged a druggist who with a deputy sheriff and a physician had gone to his cell to examine a bullet-wound in his shoulder.

Saddler is held in connection with the second robbery of the Citizens National bank here, last month.

Saddler was said to have struck the druggist with a towel, containing a small spoon, while Roy Thompson, Gurdon suspect held for arson, seized the deputy's gun.

The escape was thwarted when Mrs. Tolleson, the sheriff's wife, saw them overpower the kitchen and summoned help.

"Kingfish" Escapes Trial for Slander

But He Quickly Claims the Immunity He Once Had Waived

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Because a court found members of Congress cannot waive immunity, Louisiana's Senator Huey P. Long was free Wednesday of a slander suit filed against him by Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, retired, for his financial actions when the latter was allowed to continue.

The two suits, each seeking $500,000 damages, were brought against the self-described "Kingfish", because of a speech including a given by Long in the Senate last February. The libel action, however, was based on a distribution of letters and other remarks by the senator in leaflets from which he disclaimed.

Whether Long would be held liable to trial for the distribution of the statements, was not defined in Thursday's action.

Dismissal of the libel suit and the attorney's plea of immunity were made despite Long's boast in the senate, as reported by the Congressional Record, that "I do not claim any privilege that you senators have anywhere on earth under God's living sun."

Here's a Man Who's "Bugs" About Racing

Mr. Arthur Phillips Introduces Cockroaches to Sport of Kings

By PAUL HARRISON
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK—One of the lesser-known racing promoters around town is Mr. Arthur Phillips, a young man so well spoken and well dressed that you'd never associate him with the business. And as a matter of fact, Mr. Phillips knows practically nothing about paddock or track. He races cockroaches.

Actually... And he's doing so well at it that he has been called to Chicago to set up a big cockroach-racing concession for the world's fair, together with a stable of his fleetest insects.

Mr. Phillips is, he says, a writer by profession, and has traveled a lot. (He still has a sort of continental accent. Anyway, he discovered that in several European cities, especially Paris, many people amused themselves by betting on cockroach races. After spending 830 francs on an indolent insect named Francois, which always lay down for a nap about an inch

War Declared by Paraguay Against Republic Bolivia

Paraguayan President Signs Declaration Wednesday Morning

GRAN CHACO, CAUSE

Republics Have Been Engaged in Border Quarrel for Years

ASUNCION, Paraguay—(AP)—Paraguay formally declared war Wednesday against Bolivia.

Both South American nations have been engaged in an undeclared war in the Gran Chaco border area since last September.

President Eusebio Ayala, using the authority recently voted him by congress, signed the declaration of war at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning.

For the first time in 20 years the Chaco dispute has reached the formal status of warfare, although for years intermittent fighting has kept both nations armed.

An Old Quarrel

The quarrel between the two South American republics led them almost to a declaration of war in 1928.

The Chaco area was awarded to Paraguay in 1930 after a survey of both countries' claims by the International Conciliation Commission, meeting at Washington.

Both countries were established as republics early in the last century by Spaniards who migrated there along European lines, with a president, two-house congress and a military divided into six departments.

The Gran Chaco dispute was revived last year by Paraguay, declaring that Bolivia was again invading the territory awarded Paraguay by the mediators.

State Income Tax Due Next Monday

Forms for Filing Placed With Banks Throughout Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK—With the time for filing 1932 state income tax returns expiring Monday, May 15, there are several thousand persons who have not filed, it was said at the State Revenue Department Tuesday.

Roy G. Paschel, deputy in charge of the income tax division, said returns and payments were being received ably with those of last year. Blank forms have been placed in banks throughout the state, but that the law will not be sent out this year to assist taxpayers to make out the returns. Forms can be obtained upon application to the Revenue Department.

All single persons and married persons not living with husband or wife, who have a gross income of $1,500 a year, are required to file a return, and heads of families having an income of $2,500 are required to file.

Half the tax must be paid by May 15, but the remainder may be deferred until November 15.

Kiwanis Tourists to Columbus on May 19

Tour Omitted This Friday on Account of Hope Senior Play

Columbus is to be visited by the Kiwanis club good will trippers Friday night, May 19, for which arrangements are no being made by R. E. Jackson, principal of the Columbus school.

No trip will be made this Friday night, on account of the Hope senior play being held in Hope.

The next three communities to be visited are: DeAnn, Friday night, May 26; Gum, June 2, and Blevins June 9. Dates for other trips on succeeding Friday nights will be announced later.

One of the features of the series of trips is an essay contest open to students of the Columbus school district. This essay contest is to cause young people to take an interest in questions of the day.

Rules for the contest follow:

1. The essay shall be on the subject "What can we do as citizens to assure the maintenance and progress of our government?"

2. Not more than 1,000 words. Use the large size tablet of legal size paper only, writing on one side of the paper; must be written in pen and ink or with typewriter.

4. Essays will be judged under the following rules, to—15 per cent for composition of subject and 25 per cent for spelling, paragraphing, punctuation and neatness.

5. Contest open to all young people between the ages of 15 and 20 inclusive, residing in Hempstead county, but outside Hope special school district.

6. All young people entering should file their essays with Joe R. Floyd, city hall, Hope, Ark., not later than midnight August 1. Name should not appear on the essay, but on a separate page, which may be detached by Mr. Floyd before turning the essays over to the judges. Judges are not to know who files any essay.

7. Three judges to grade the papers and name the winners will be members of the Kiwanis club selected by Joe R. Floyd, president.

8. The actual work of composing and writing each theme must be done by the contestant, without the aid or assistance of any person, and the contestant will certify on the page containing his or her name and address that the theme submitted was composed and written without aid or assistance from any person.

The prizes will be as follows: First, $10; second, $5; third $2.50, all in cash.

Members of the club will offer other prizes, in merchandise or in cash, the list to be announced later.

"Social Gang" Is Flayed by Crimm

Never Touched by "Culture" Until They Learn About Bridge, Says He

Evangelist B. B. Crimm Tuesday night brought a tubercular message to the world conditions confronting the church and the ministry.

He related the story of Zacheus and his desire to see Jesus Christ as he passed by. The Rev. Mr. Crimm said that many are similar to Jesus in faith and for forgiveness of sins, but that leave the crowd and step aruties them from Jesus, just as Zacheus did.

"Many of you right here in Hope are held back by the crowd. Until you leave your crowd you will never see Jesus. There are several gangs in Hope. I want to discuss them. Every city, and we are against, of course. But the old saying is true: 'Birds of a feather will flock together.'

"The first gang I want to open up on is that old church-hating gang. You know Jim Workman, Conway, W. M. Kothley of Cleveland, Miss., daughters, Mrs. B. E. Wood, Jr., of Hope and Mrs. Paul Dudney of Washington.

Signs of Better Times

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Editorial Writer

THE present moment is an excellent time for all of us to keep in mind the remark with which Mr. Roosevelt stepped into the White House—that the only thing we really have to fear these days is fear itself.

On the surface, the state of the nation right now is ominous enough to scare almost anyone. Both the domestic and foreign horizons are dark with clouds. Any man who wanted to argue that the end of all things was about at hand could find plenty of material for his thesis.

But it would be very easy for us to concentrate on our troubles so thoroughly that we failed to see how much real progress has actually been made.

Banks may be re-opening at a much slower rate than we had hoped; but the dreadful era of doubt and uncertainty is at least passed, and the banking problem today is not so much a matter of stopping a slide downhill as of accelerating a climb upward.

Unemployment and factory production figures may still be distressingly low; but such basic industries as steel and automobile manufacturing are showing better than seasonal up-trends, and there are signs that the rise in commodity and security prices are not entirely due to the talk of inflation.

The turmoil in Iowa testifies abundantly that agricultural discontent is still with us; but farm prices have turned upward, and the purchasing power of the farmer has been increasing ever since the middle of the winter.

The pendulum swings slowly, of course. The effects of four years of disaster cannot be wiped out overnight. But there are good reasons for believing that the swing back in the right direction has actually commenced, and that if we are not yet out of the woods we are at least getting to the point where a little more sunlight filters down through the branches overhead.

If we can just keep from getting jittery we ought to make out all right. There is no sense, of course, in denying that some things look very discomforting. But unless we permit ourselves to get scared out of our senses, we ought, to be able to find the right road and stay on it.

Inflation and How Far It Shall Go

THE implications of the administration inflation proposal which Congress has accepted are so broad that the country has been anxious to know how far the president may be expected to go in using the enormous powers conferred on him.

In his Sunday night address Mr. Roosevelt committed himself to the "definite objective" of using inflation to such a degree that as he expressed it,

"those who have borrowed money will, on the average, be able to repay that money in the same kind of dollar that they borrowed. We do not seek to let them get such a cheap dollar that they will be able to pay back a great deal less than they borrowed."

One of the chief and most substantial complaints about the present low price range is that in effect it makes the farmer who a few years ago got in debt to the equivalent of 10 bales of cotton hand over from 20 to 30 bales to satisfy his creditor, while in the grain belt a debt representing originally 10,000 bushels of wheat will take, say, 30,000 bushels to pay off now. If price raising through currency inflation could iron out such inequities as those, the popular demand for it should be satisfied, and any economic justification for it would certainly disappear.

When the president pledges himself to "controlled inflation," any doubt about his program will question, not his sincerity, but his ability to keep the process under control. The history of previous operations of this sort is not reassuring. Almost without exception, inflation once started has got out of control sooner or later.

But in every previous currency inflation that comes to mind, the government concerned has been in a race with an uncontrolled budget. It has printed money to pay its current bills. Our operating budget will be balanced by the administration's drastic retrenchment program.

Furthermore, we shall start inflation, not with our present stock of currency stripped of its gold backing, but with the Treasury holding the largest stock of monetary gold anywhere on earth. The government could resume gold payments tomorrow if it were deemed advisable.

In these two unusual factors, we have a condition unique in the history of inflation.—Arkansas Gazette.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MONNIE O'DARE, in love with DAN CARDIGAN, local heir to a fortune, believes she is losing him to SANDRA LAWRENCE who has pretended to be Monnie's friend. In spite of the attentions of CHARLES EUSTACE, handsome newcomer, Monnie pines for Dan. After neglecting her for some time Dan again seems interested. At a big party which Sandra gives, Dan is missing. There is a scene between Sandra and BETTY, her maid, who believes Sandra is "vamping" JAMES, the chauffeur. Monnie and KAY, her younger sister, have been trying to keep secret from their mother the fact that their brother, BILL, is in love with a married woman. MRS. O'DARE learns this through a neighbor's gossip.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX

"IT'S all—pretty unsatisfactory," Monnie murmured, pleating the folds of her white scarf.

"I know that—I know that," Dan protested, eyeing her uneasily. They were seated on the bank of the river under the low hanging branches of the willows. The day was clear and hot. No haze dimmed the imperturbable blue of the sky. Monnie's white linen looked cool in the glimmer.

"It's uncomfortable for me," Monnie went on, speaking quickly, eagerly, as if to justify her complaint. "Mother wants to know where I'm going and I tell her. She doesn't say anything—but of course I know what she feels."

"Well, what does she feel?" Dan's tone was almost sullen, although he tried to keep a bantering note in it.

"That—that I oughtn't to go on like this, seeing you all the time, being serious about it," the girl explained with difficulty. "I know we're engaged, Dan. That part of it's all right! But so long as you want to keep it in the dark, well, it makes it so much harder for me. You know as well as I do how tongues wag. And we've been going places together for a long time, Dan," she reminded him, trying to speak lightly.

"It's nobody else's business!" he declared. "You know—and I know. Whose affair is it, anyway? My mother'd raise the roof if she knew about it. All I want is to keep things dark until I come into Uncle Frank's money. That's in January, right after my birthday. Then we can walk off and tell them all to go to—!" He reached over and drew her toward him, his tones muffled. "Monnie, sweets, let's forget all about them. We're wasting our time talking about things that don't matter. Let's talk about ourselves."

INWARDLY the girl sighed. Their discussions always ended this way. Dan's kiss stopped her protests. While she was with him she, too, could believe that their affairs were distinctly their own. But when she left him, when she met curious, prying friends, she longed for the right to tell them her glorious secret. "Dan Cardigan and I are engaged."

The joyful comments, the pleased, envious, interested looks—all these would be part of being formally engaged. Notes, little presents, the right to be seen everywhere with Dan, his acknowledged choice. Best of all her mother's sense of security. She sighed aloud now, thinking of all this.

Dan turned to look at her. "What's the matter now?" he demanded. "I thought we had it all thrashed out?" He was frowning. Monnie, anxious to keep him in good temper, flashed him a reassuring smile.

"Just happy," she lied. "It's been a wonderful day. Let's gather up the things now and go along. I want to pick some raspberries."

But all the rest of the long, golden afternoon her mind kept harking back to the conversation. Dan was perfectly right about the whole thing, she would assure herself. And yet—and yet she would be willing to give up everything, all the brilliant hopes of Uncle Frank's money and the rest, if Dan would say to her, joyously, some afternoon, "Let's dash over to High Springs and get married."

He had, once before, but he hadn't really meant it. He would have been terribly surprised if Monnie had taken him at his word. Now she would give anything in the world to hear him say those words. She would take the supreme chance, the chance of a battle with poverty, to be the acknowledged wife of Daniel Cardigan, junior. No more meeting Dan by stealth, so that the argus-eyed Mrs. Cardigan would not hear of their renewed devotion. No more eluding the subject, blushing and stammering, when people asked her about Dan.

"I know you love me, Dan," she would explain patiently, "I understand. Of course it's all right. In January—in January—"

It would not be long until January. They could wait. They were both young. But this was high summer. The days and nights were achingly beautiful. Never did Monica see the moon riding high but that she longed to share the sight with Dan. She wanted to share homely things with him, too. Breakfasts and casual rides in the country. All the sweet privileges of the young wife seemed marvelous to her. It was difficult, sometimes, to believe that all this would be theirs a little later.

Meantime she had to be patient.

* * *

CHARLES EUSTACE came to the house rather often these days. Monnie, resting, limp and relaxed, in the porch swing, would hear a light step on the walk, would look up to see Charles, handsome, dark, smiling, towering over her. She could be easy with this man. They could talk, simply, deeply, for hours. Charles, she felt certain, was enormously attracted to Kay. Of course, it was absurd—Kay was not yet 17—10 years his junior. And yet, what a splendid thing it would be for her little sister if this man were to want her for his wife! He had everything—looks, family, money, what the world called "background."

"He's fascinating," Monnie acknowledged to herself when alone. "I like him so much. But love—no, I could never love Charles."

It was just as well, she reminded herself, that Charles was attracted to Kay. Kay was sparkling, animated. She made a splendid foil for his dark and slightly mysterious good looks.

"He," averred Kay one night, discussing him, "had some sort of heavy love affair in France last year."

"How do you know?"

Kay shrugged. "Lib Waterman told Rissy. Rissy doesn't know the details but part of it got into the papers."

Monica couldn't have explained the queer little tug at her heartstrings. Charles involved in an affair with a woman—important enough to have got into the papers! Absurd! She didn't like it.

"I don't believe it," she said stoutly. "Rissy talks such nonsense and so does Lib."

"Well, I don't know," Kay told her carelessly. "He always sheers away from the subject of his stay abroad, if you notice it."

Monica had observed this. But she refused to credit Rissy's gossip. It all sounded so—well, so shady. She just didn't believe it.

* * *

KAY gave her a sidelong glimmering look at the end of this discussion.

"Anybody'd think you were annoyed to find that Charles had ever looked at anyone else," she said in a small, child's voice. This Monica found extremely irritating and said so.

"I think that's perfect nonsense," she said. "I never heard anything so silly." Her cheeks, she discovered, were hot—were blazing. She felt furious with Kay—with everybody.

"I can't see what possible difference it makes to you," Kay giggled. "As far as Charles is concerned you're the original Ice Maiden."

Monica stared at her. Was it true—was she completely indifferent to this distinguished young man who lent her books and walked with her under the trees and told her amusing stories in his lazy cultivated voice?

"He's been awfully nice to me," she said. "Naturally I hate to think he's not—not all I thought him."

She couldn't understand why Kay smiled so meaningly.

It was odd how Charles' name cropped up in conversation these days. When she met Dan that night at the turn of the road where he had waited for her in the summer dusk he said, "Doesn't that fellow hang around an awful lot nowadays?"

Monnie, thinking of other things, frankly stared. "Who?"

Grimly Dan indicated Charles' car, at that very moment stopping at the O'Dares' gate some hundred rods away.

Monnie was glad of the darkness, hiding her flush.

"Dan, don't be a goose. He comes to see the family."

"Expect me to believe that?" But Dan's tone was milder.

"He's interested in Kay. He's been wonderful to her. Dr. Waterman has recommended her for a job in the library. She's starting next Monday and is wild with joy."

Dan said nothing but he seemed, for the moment, mollified.

Later, lying awake in the little room under the hot roof, listening to Kay's even breathing, hearing Bill creak up the stairs, Monnie found herself thinking of Charles Eustace—of what Kay had said.

She turned and twisted from side to side. She could not seem to get to sleep. After all, what did it matter what Charles had been in the past, what adventures he had known? He was nothing to her. She was engaged to Dan Cardigan—although no one knew it.

'Cynara' Is Rated One of Best Films

Ronald Colman and Kay Francis at the Saenger Two Days

"Cynara," from the international stage success, is a perfect vehicle for the inimitable talents of Ronald Colman, and Kay Francis now showing at the Saenger and with a bargain matinee Thursday at 2:30.

Advance reports from Hollywood—and from disinterested observers, too—had placed "Cynara" far up in the list of the season's best efforts, and certainly local audiences agreed with that verdict yesterday.

The story, of course, is made to order for Ronald Colman, and, framed with the Samuel Goldwyn standard, it makes a great human document. It is crammed full of situations that arise to rare reality and touch deep poignancy. The word "sophisticated" with regard to motion pictures has been very much abused, but here is one instance in which it must be used. For sophistication fairly sticks out of "Cynara," but, contrary to the usual story, it exerts a strong appeal for the socalled masses.

Colman was never better than in the role of Jim Warlock, the young English barrister who, much against his better judgment, is drawn by his best friend into what is called a harmless flirtation and which results in disaster for everybody concerned.

Kay Francis, in the role of Warlock's young wife, gives one of those finished performances which is her wont, only this time she is better than ever. And a newcomer from England named Phyllis Barry soars to the heights in this, her first Hollywood effort. Miss Barry is bound to be in great demand because of this artistic portrayal.

The morning glories dropped drowsily;
Their act for the day was done;
Shyly budded the four-o-clocks;
Their cue the descending sun.
One little morning glory raised its head
And to the four-o-clock sleepily said
"It is just fate that you are so late,
We're here at the break of dawn,
Why is it you so hesitate "
Brightly, more brightly the four-o-clock smiled,
And said as the shadows faintly filed,
"You greet the day, in your colors gay
And in the same appointed way,
We bid it go with our farewell nod—
It may be fate,—we call it God.

Lindy, Witness at Trial of Means

Testifies to Kidnaping of Son, in Ransom Fraud Case

WASHINGTON —Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took the stand here Tuesday in the District Supreme Court and told for the first time publicly in any court, about the kidnaping and killing of his infant son last year.

The crowd, which pused its curious way into the room heard business-like replies to the routine questions which United States Attorney Leo A. Rover asked in his effort to tighten the government's case against Gaston B. Means and Norman T. Whitaker, on trial for conspiracy to defraud Mrs. Edward B. McLean of 35,000 in return for the promised recovery of the Lindbergh baby.

Behind each question that Rover asked was a picture that brought tears to the eyes of many women in the room. And behind each answer that Lindbergh made was a memory that twisted up his lips nervously.

Another B. E. F. on March to Capital

Administration Wants to Get It Over With Quickly as Possible

WASHINGTON.(AP)—By freight and passenger trains, automobiles and afoot, another bonus march is converging upon Washington with the administration trying to prevent disorders.

W. W. Waters, commander of the B. E. F. last summer, is not expected, but some of his lieutenants are back, even though their following is greatly reduced.

County Clerk Is Cleared of Fraud

Jury Frees Him at Newport, Ark.—Federal Charge Pending

NEWPORT, Ark.— (AP) —A circuit court jury late Monday night acquitted John L. McLain, county and probate clerk, of Jackson county, of a charge of embezzling $1,400 of Arkansas Game & Fish Commission funds while he was circuit clerk a few years ago.

He is under bond awaiting trial on charges of converting federal funds to his own use while received for a levee district in Jackson county.

Business Gaining, Wages Increased

Tires, Cash Registers, Shoes, and Cotton Mills Feel New Urge

NEW YORK—Additional wage increases, gains in business and increased employment were announced by industries in various sections of the country Tuesday raising the purchasing power of the workers in some 25 states. Business reports and forecasts were optimistic and hope for the future appeared to be growing.

Heartened by President Roosevelt's drive against the depression and the plans for the future which he outlined in his nationwide radio address Sunday night, many of the concerns announced their wage increases were in line with the president's appeal.

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. announced in Akron that, effective Tuesday, it was placing its general office employes on a working basis of five eight-hour days aweek, 60 per cent of the employes who for some time have been working on a basis of five-seven-hour days and 12½ per cent salary cut instituted at the start of the curtailing working period.

Many concerns, while not increasing wages, are taking on extra employes as a result of increased business.

A wage increase of 10 per cent, benefiting 260 men, was announced by the Armstrong Rubber company, tire makers of New Haven, and a 20 per cent increase, affecting 700 employes was announced by the Planters Nut & Chocolate Co. in Suffolk, Va. From Detroit, Richmond, Va., and several Georgia, New York and Kentucky cities came reports of additions to pay rolls.

Cash Registers in Demand

The National Cash Register Company reported that orders amounting to $148,250 were received Monday, the largest Monday total in 18 months. Sales in April were the largest of any month this year and above those of April last year, the company reports, and sales in May are showing corresponding increases.

Another interstate organization moving toward pre-depression wage and salary levels was the Columbian Peanut Company which announced increases of from 10 to 20 per cent for its 2,000 employes in 26 mills spread throughout five states. A definite upward trend was discerned by the company in its business volume this year, President C. H. Smither said.

At Binghampton, N. Y., the Endicott-Johnson Company announced its shoe factories there and at Endicott and at Johnson City would be returned at once to full schedule and capacity production.

The Artistic Shirt company of Albany with more than 2,000 employes in Albany, Troy, Kingston and New York, city, announced immediate wage increases of 10 per cent.

South Grows Optimistic

More textile mills of the South also felt the buoyant optimism of higher wages. Fifteen cotton mills in the Greenville (S. C.) district, advanced all wages 10 per cent. They represent 600,000 spindles.

At Uniontown, Pa., an immediate 5 per cent increase for its [illegible] employes was ordered by the Berkowitz shirt factory.

In New Orleans Bluford Balter, realtor and civic leader, raised the salaries of all his employes 10 per cent and appealed to other employers to follow his lead.

"Three employers called me within 10 minutes and said they were adding from 5 to 7 per cent to salaries," he said. "A clothing merchant came back from the Eastern markets today and said the rush of buying was so great he would have to mait months to get his orders filled."

BILIOUSNESS

"My trouble was biliousness—the whole spring and summer I was almost down, felt so sluggish, tired and dizzy," writes Mr. S. W. Taylor, of Joplin, Mo. "I remembered that at one time Black-Draught had helped me. I went to the drug store and bought a package and began taking it at night. After then, I felt as well as anyone. I am full of pep and get out on the farm and do a real day's work, so I feel that I owe my good health to the use of Black-Draught."

Signs of Better Times

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Editorial Writer

THE present moment is an excellent time for all of us to keep in mind the remark with which Mr. Roosevelt stepped into the White House—that the only thing we really have to fear these days is fear itself.

On the surface, the state of the nation right now is ominous enough to scare almost anyone. Both the domestic and foreign horizons are dark with clouds. Any man who wanted to argue that the end of all things was about at hand could find plenty of material for his thesis.

But it would be very easy for us to concentrate on our troubles so thoroughly that we failed to see how much real progress has actually been made.

Banks may be re-opening at a much slower rate than we had hoped; but the dreadful era of doubt and uncertainty is at least passed, and the banking problem today is not so much a matter of stopping a slide downhill as of accelerating a climb upward.

Unemployment and factory production figures may still be distressingly low; but such basic industries as steel and automobile manufacturing are showing better than seasonal up-trends, and there are signs that the rise in commodity and security prices are not entirely due to the talk of inflation.

The turmoil in Iowa testifies abundantly that agricultural discontent is still with us; but farm prices have turned upward, and the purchasing power of the farmer has been increasing ever since the middle of the winter.

The pendulum swings slowly, of course. The effects of four years of disaster cannot be wiped out overnight. But there are good reasons for believing that the swing back in the right direction has actually commenced, and that if we are not yet out of the woods we are at least getting to the point where a little more sunlight filters down through the branches overhead.

If we can just keep from getting jittery we ought to make out all right. There is no sense, of course, in denying that some things look very discomforting. But unless we permit ourselves to get scared out of our senses, we ought, to be able to find the right road and stay on it.

Inflation and How Far It Shall Go

THE implications of the administration inflation proposal which Congress has accepted are so broad that the country has been anxious to know how far the president may be expected to go in using the enormous powers conferred on him.

In his Sunday night address Mr. Roosevelt committed himself to the "definite objective" of using inflation to such a degree that as he expressed it,

"those who have borrowed money will, on the average, be able to repay that money in the same kind of dollar that they borrowed. We do not seek to let them get such a cheap dollar that they will be able to pay back a great deal less than they borrowed."

One of the chief and most substantial complaints about the present low price range is that in effect it makes the farmer who a few years ago got in debt to the equivalent of 10 bales of cotton hand over from 20 to 30 bales to satisfy his creditor, while in the grain belt a debt representing originally 10,000 bushels of wheat will take, say, 30,000 bushels to pay off now. If price raising through currency inflation could iron out such inequities as those, the popular demand for it should be satisfied, and any economic justification for it would certainly disappear.

When the president pledges himself to "controlled inflation," any doubt about his program will question, not his sincerity, but his ability to keep the process under control. The history of previous operations of this sort is not reassuring. Almost without exception, inflation once started has got out of control sooner or later.

But in every previous currency inflation that comes to mind, the government concerned has been in a race with an uncontrolled budget. It has printed money to pay its current bills. Our operating budget will be balanced by the administration's drastic retrenchment program.

Furthermore, we shall start inflation, not with our present stock of currency stripped of its gold backing, but with the Treasury holding the largest stock of monetary gold anywhere on earth. The government could resume gold payments tomorrow if it were deemed advisable.

In these two unusual factors, we have a condition unique in the history of inflation.—Arkansas Gazette.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MONNIE O'DARE, in love with DAN CARDIGAN, local heir to a fortune, believes she is losing him to SANDRA LAWRENCE who has pretended to be Monnie's friend. In spite of the attentions of CHARLES EUSTACE, handsome newcomer, Monnie pines for Dan. After neglecting her for some time Dan again seems interested. At a big party which Sandra gives, Dan is missing. There is a scene between Sandra and BETTY, her maid, who believes Sandra is "vamping" JAMES, the chauffeur. Monnie and KAY, her younger sister, have been trying to keep secret from their mother the fact that their brother, BILL, is in love with a married woman. MRS. O'DARE learns this through a neighbor's gossip.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX

"IT'S all—pretty unsatisfactory," Monnie murmured, pleating the folds of her white scarf.

"I know that—I know that," Dan protested, eyeing her uneasily. They were seated on the bank of the river under the low hanging branches of the willows. The day was clear and hot. No haze dimmed the imperturbable blue of the sky. Monnie's white linen looked cool in the glimmer.

"It's uncomfortable for me," Monnie went on, speaking quickly, eagerly, as if to justify her complaint. "Mother wants to know where I'm going and I tell her. She doesn't say anything—but of course I know what she feels."

"Well, what does she feel?" Dan's tone was almost sullen, although he tried to keep a bantering note in it.

"That—that I oughtn't to go on like this, seeing you all the time, being serious about it," the girl explained with difficulty. "I know we're engaged, Dan. That part of it's all right! But so long as you want to keep it in the dark, well, it makes it so much harder for me. You know as well as I do how tongues wag. And we've been going places together for a long time, Dan," she reminded him, trying to speak lightly.

"It's nobody else's business!" he declared. "You know—and I know. Whose affair is it, anyway? My mother'd raise the roof if she knew about it. All I want is to keep things dark until I come into Uncle Frank's money. That's in January, right after my birthday. Then we can walk off and tell them all to go to—!" He reached over and drew her toward him, his tones muffled. "Monnie, sweets, let's forget all about them. We're wasting our time talking about things that don't matter. Let's talk about ourselves."

* * *

INWARDLY the girl sighed. Their discussions always ended this way. Dan's kiss stopped her protests. While she was with him she, too, could believe that their affairs were distinctly their own. But when she left him, when she met curious, prying friends, she longed for the right to tell them her glorious secret. "Dan Cardigan and I are engaged."

The joyful comments, the pleased, envious, interested looks—all these would be part of being formally engaged. Notes, little presents, the right to be seen everywhere with Dan, his acknowledged choice. Best of all her mother's sense of security. She sighed aloud now, thinking of all this.

Dan turned to look at her. "What's the matter now?" he demanded. "I thought we had it all thrashed out?" He was frowning. Monnie, anxious to keep him in good temper, flashed him a reassuring smile.

"Just happy," she lied. "It's been a wonderful day. Let's gather up the things now and go along. I want to pick some raspberries."

But all the rest of the long, golden afternoon her mind kept harking back to the conversation. Dan was perfectly right about the whole thing, she would assure herself. And yet—and yet she would be willing to give up everything, all the brilliant hopes of Uncle Frank's money and the rest, if Dan would say to her, joyously, some afternoon, "Let's dash over to High Springs and get married."

He had, once before, but he hadn't really meant it. He would have been terribly surprised if Monnie had taken him at his word. Now she would give anything in the world to hear him say those words. She would take the supreme chance, the chance of a battle with poverty, to be the acknowledged wife of Daniel Cardigan, junior. No more meeting Dan by stealth, so that the argus-eyed Mrs. Cardigan would not hear of their renewed devotion. No more eluding the subject, blushing and stammering, when people asked her about Dan.

"I know you love me, Dan," she would explain patiently. "I understand. Of course it's all right. In January—in January—"

It would not be long until January. They could wait. They were both young. But this was high summer. The days and nights were achingly beautiful. Never did Monica see the moon riding high but that she longed to share the sight with Dan. She wanted to share homely things with him, too. Breakfasts and casual rides in the country. All the sweet privileges of the young wife seemed marvelous to her. It was difficult, sometimes, to believe that all this would be theirs a little later.

Meantime she had to be patient.

* * *

CHARLES EUSTACE came to the house rather often these days. Monnie, resting, limp and relaxed, in the porch swing, would hear a light step on the walk, would look up to see Charles, handsome, dark, smiling, towering over her. She could be easy with this man. They could talk, simply, deeply, for hours. Charles, she felt certain, was enormously attracted to Kay. Of course, it was absurd—Kay was not yet 17—10 years his junior. And yet, what a splendid thing it would be for her little sister if this man were to want her for his wife! He had everything—looks, family, money, what the world called "background."

"He's fascinating," Monnie acknowledged to herself when alone. "I like him so much. But love—no, I could never love Charles."

It was just as well, she reminded herself, that Charles was attracted to Kay. Kay was sparkling, animated. She made a splendid foil for his dark and slightly mysterious good looks.

"He," averred Kay one night, discussing him, "had some sort of heavy love affair in France last year."

"How do you know?"

Kay shrugged. "Lib Waterman told Rissy. Rissy doesn't know the details but part of it got into the papers."

Monica couldn't have explained the queer little tug at her heartstrings. Charles involved in an affair with a woman—important enough to have got into the papers! Absurd! She didn't like it.

"I don't believe it," she said stoutly. "Rissy talks such nonsense and so does Lib."

"Well, I don't know," Kay told her carelessly. "He always sheers away from the subject of his stay abroad, if you notice it."

Monica had observed this. But she refused to credit Rissy's gossip. It all sounded so—well, so shady. She just didn't believe it.

* * *

KAY gave her a sidelong glimmering look at the end of this discussion.

"Anybody'd think you were annoyed to find that Charles had ever looked at anyone else," she said in a small, child's voice. This Monica found extremely irritating and said so.

"I think that's perfect nonsense," she said. "I never heard anything so silly." Her cheeks, she discovered, were hot—were blazing. She felt furious with Kay—with everybody.

"I can't see what possible difference it makes to you," Kay giggled. "As far as Charles is concerned you're the original Ice Maiden."

Monica stared at her. Was it true—was she completely indifferent to this distinguished young man who lent her books and walked with her under the trees and told her amusing stories in his lazy cultivated voice?

"He's been awfully nice to me," she said. "Naturally I hate to think he's not—not all I thought him."

She couldn't understand why Kay smiled so meaningly.

It was odd how Charles' name cropped up in conversation these days. When she met Dan that night at the turn of the road where he had waited for her in the summer dusk he said, "Doesn't that fellow hang around an awful lot nowadays?"

Monnie, thinking of other things, frankly stared. "Who?"

Grimly Dan indicated Charles' car, at that very moment stopping at the O'Dares' gate some hundred rods away.

Monnie was glad of the darkness, hiding her flush.

"Dan, don't be a goose. He comes to see the family."

"Expect me to believe that?" But Dan's tone was milder.

"He's interested in Kay. He's been wonderful to her. Dr. Waterman has recommended her for a job in the library. She's starting next Monday and is wild with joy."

Dan said nothing but he seemed, for the moment, mollified.

Later, lying awake in the little room under the hot roof, listening to Kay's even breathing, hearing Bill creak up the stairs, Monnie found herself thinking of Charles Eustace—of what Kay had said.

She turned and twisted from side to side. She could not seem to get to sleep. After all, what did it matter what Charles had been in the past, what adventures he had known? He was nothing to her. She was engaged to Dan Cardigan—although no one knew it.

'Cynara' Is Rated One of Best Films

Ronald Colman and Kay Francis at the Saenger Two Days

"Cynara," from the international stage success, is a perfect vehicle for the inimitable talents of Ronald Colman, and Kay Francis now showing at the Saenger and with a bargain matinee Thursday at 2:30.

Advance reports from Hollywood—and from disinterested observers, too—had placed "Cynara" far up in the list of the season's best efforts, and certainly local audiences agreed with that verdict yesterday.

The story, of course, is made to order for Ronald Colman, and, framed with the Samuel Goldwyn standard, it makes a great human document. It is crammed full of situations that arise to rare reality and touch deep poignancy. The word "sophisticated" with regard to motion pictures has been very much abused, but here is one instance in which it must be used. For sophistication fairly sticks out of "Cynara," but, contrary to the usual story, it exerts a strong appeal for the socalled masses.

Colman was never better than in the role of Jim Warlock, the young English barrister who, much against his better judgment, is drawn by his best friend into what is called a harmless flirtation and which results in disaster for everybody concerned.

Kay Francis, in the role of Warlock's young wife, gives one of those finished performances which is her wont, only this time she is better than ever. And a newcomer from England named Phyllis Barry soars to the heights in this, her first Hollywood effort. Miss Barry is bound to be in great demand because of this artistic portrayal.

Overheard at the Garden Gate.

The morning glories dropped drowsily;
Their act for the day was done;
Shyly budded the four-o-clocks;
Their cue the descending sun.
One little morning glory raised its head
And to the four-o-clock sleepily said
"It is just fate that you are so late,
We're here at the break of dawn,
Why is it you so hesitate"
Brightly, more brightly the four-o-clock smiled,
And said as the shadows faintly filed,
"You greet the day, in your colors gay
And in the same appointed way,
We bid it go with our farewell nod—
It may be fate,—we call it God.

No movie party would be complete without Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, and it was throug the kindness and personal attractions of Hugh Smith and Dr. A. C. Kolb, that they were able to attend the party, Henry Taylor brought up the rear of the crowd with platinum blond Jean Harlow. Since it is an every day and night occurance for these celebrities to entertain and amuse crowds, it would not be putting it too strong to say they were the "hit" of the party.

The Junior-Senior High P. T. A. will meet at 3:30 on Thursday afternoon in the library room at the high school. This will be the last meeting of the school term, and the president urges a full attendance.

Lindy, Witness at Trial of Means

Testifies to Kidnaping of Son, in Ransom Fraud Case

WASHINGTON —Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took the stand here Tuesday in the District Supreme Court and told for the first time publicly in any court, about the kidnaping and killing of his infant son last year.

The crowd, which pused its curious way into the room heard business-like replies to the routine questions which United States Attorney Leo A. Rover asked in his effort to tighten the government's case against Gaston B. Means and Norman T. Whitaker, on trial for conspiracy to defraud Mrs. Edward B. McLean of 35,000 in return for the promised recovery of the Lindbergh baby.

Behind each question that Rover asked was a picture that brought tears to the eyes of many women in the room. And behind each answer that Lindbergh made was a memory that twisted up his lips nervously.

Another B. E. F. on March to Capital

Administration Wants to Get It Over With Quickly as Possible

WASHINGTON.(AP)—By freight and passenger trains, automobiles and afoot, another bonus march is converging upon Washington with the administration trying to prevent disorders.

W. W. Waters, commander of the B. E. F. last summer, is not expected, but some of his lieutenants are back, even though their following is greatly reduced.

Dissention among the spokesmen for the new march has complicated the problem of the authorities who offered co-operation in an effort to hold a meeting, get it over with and get the visitors out of the capital.

County Clerk Is Cleared of Fraud

Jury Frees Him at Newport, Ark.—Federal Charge Pending

NEWPORT, Ark.— (AP) —A circuit court jury late Monday night acquitted John L. McLain, county and probate clerk, of Jackson county, of a charge of embezzling $1,400 of Arkansas Game & Fish Commission funds while he was circuit clerk a few years ago.

He is under bond awaiting trial on charges of converting federal funds to his own use while received for a levee district in Jackson county.

Business Gaining, Wages Increased

Tires, Cash Registers, .. Shoes, and Cotton Mills.. Feel New Urge

NEW YORK—Additional wage increases, gains in business and increased employment were announced by industries in various sections of the country Tuesday raising the purchasing power of the workers in some 25 states. Business reports and forecasts were optimistic and hope for the future appeared to be growing.

Heartened by President Roosevelt's drive against the depression and the plans for the future which he outlined in his nationwide radio address Sunday night, many of the concerns announced their wage increases were in line with the president's appeal.

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. announced in Akron that, effective Tuesday, it was placing its general office employes on a working basis of five eight-hour days aweek, 60 per cent of the employes who for some time have been working on a basis of five-seven-hour days and 12½ per cent salary cut instituted at the start of the curtailing working period.

Many concerns, while not increasing wages, are taking on extra employes as a result of increased business.

A wage increase of 10 per cent, benefiting 260 men, was announced by the Armstrong Rubber company, tire makers of New Haven, and a 20 per cent increase, affecting 700 employes was announced by the Planters Nut & Chocolate Co. in Suffolk, Va. From Detroit, Richmond, Va., and several Georgia, New York and Kentucky cities came reports of additions to pay rolls.

Cash Registers in Demand

The National Cash Register Company reported that orders amounting to $143,250 were received Monday, the largest Monday total in 18 months. Sales in April were the largest of any month this year and above those of April last year, the company reports, and sales in May are showing corresponding increases.

Another interstate organization moving toward pre-depression wage and salary levels was the Columbian Peanut Company which announced increases of from 10 to 20 per cent for its 2,000 employes in 26 mills spread throughout five states. A definite upward trend was discerned by the company in its business volume this year, President C. H. Smither said.

At Binghampton, N. Y., the Endicott-Johnson Company announced its shoe factories there and at Endicott and at Johnson City would be returned at once to full schedule and capacity production.

The Artistic Shirt company of Albany with more than 2,000 employes in Albany, Troy, Kingston and New York, city, announced immediate wage increases of 10 per cent.

South Grows Optimistic

More textile mills of the South also felt the buoyant optimism of higher wages. Fifteen cotton mills in the Greenville (S. C.) district, advanced all wages 10 per cent. They represent 600,000 spindles.

At Uniontown, Pa., an immediate 5 per cent increase for its 450 employes was ordered by the Berkowitz shirt factory.

In New Orleans Bluford Balter, realtor and civic leader, raised the salaries of all his employes 10 per cent and appealed to other employers to follow his lead.

"Three employers called me within 10 minutes and said they were adding from 5 to 7 per cent to salaries," he said. "A clothing merchant came back from the Eastern markets today and said the rush of buying was so great he would have to wait months to get his orders filled."

BILIOUSNESS

"My trouble was biliousness—the whole spring and summer I was almost down, felt so sluggish, tired and dizzy," writes Mr. S. W. Taylor, of Joplin, Mo. "I remembered that at one time Black-Draught had helped me. I went to the drug store and bought a package and began taking it at night. After then, I felt as well as anyone. I am full of pep and get out on the farm and do a real day's work, so I feel that I owe my good health to the use of Black-Draught."

Ford Advertising Opens This Month

Last Monday Best Sales Finance Day Since August, 1932

DETROIT, Mich.—Declaring "we have made a complete turnaround and at last America's face is toward the future," Henry Ford Monday inaugurated a new advertising campaign for the V-8 car employing daily and weekly newspapers throughout the country.

Ford in his first advertisement, will announce his faith in President Roosevelts "new deal for industry." It is the first advertising campaign undertaken by this company since March of 1932.

"Three years—1929 to 1932—we American looked backward" he said "All our old financial and political machinery was geared to pull us out of the depression by the same door through which we entered. We thought it simply a case of going back the way we came. It failed. We now realize that way out is forward—through it.

"Thanks for that belongs to President Roosevelt. Inauguration day he turned the ship of state around."

On Monday, Universal Credit company branches throughout the United States purchased more notes on partial payment plan financing of Ford sales to users than on any single day since last August, said Tom McLarty, local Ford dealer.

The Universal serves as the financing company of Ford car financing. This record would indicate that more Ford cars were bought last Saturday than on any one day since last August, Mr. McLarty said.

Church Missions Also Feel Panic

Annual Methodist Report Reveals Decrease of Income

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—A decrease in income and an increase in needs and opportunities of missionary work of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, during the past year was reported Wednesday by Dr. O. E. Goddard, secretary of foreign missions, to the board of missions at the eighty-second annual session here.

His report covered activities of missionaries of the church in many foreign lands.

He said that in China there had been a decrease in general hostility to hospitality toward Christian thought and that country "was never so ripe for evangelism as now"; that in Japan, the "war spirit is rife only in the military circles of the government"; "in Europe, radical changes have been made in the interest of economy." He said that some of the Missionaries there have been obliged to contract workers but none of the missions had been closed.

Miss Sallie Lou McKinnon, foreign secretary, woman's work, reported that the past year had been one of uncertainty and of difficulty in foreign missions. "Unstable economic and political conditions in these countries have made field contributions and collections of fees necessarily small while the same conditions have made needs and opportunities increasingly urgent and demanding," she reported. "The financial situation in the United States has made decreases in appropriations inevitable."

Major Hicks to Take Charge Forest Camps

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Major George R. Hicks of the U. S. army has been assigned to duty in the Ozark national forest in charge of civilian conservation corps camps at Frazier, Cass, Fort, Douglass, Victor and Fifty-Six. He said he established headquarters' here.

Work of building the camps has started. They will consist of four barracks each, 30 by 120 feet, and will receive the 200 forest workers in each camp.

Editorial By Alex. H. Washburn

GASTON MEANS, a corrupt but strange and sinister figure, is with us again in today's news. On trial at Washington for grafting $35,000 from Mrs. Edward B. McLean who sought to help the Lindberghs get back their baby, Means told the jury today the names of two men he said did the kidnaping. Also, he said these men made two attempts to return the baby after the ransom had been paid.

Means is a double-crosser and a liar.

This was proven when the government sent him to Atlanta penitentiary for his connection with the scandals of the Harding administration.

He is a sensationalist—always "Johnny on the spot," with his eye at the keyhole, whether the keyhole leads to Attorney General Daugherty's office, "The Strange Death of President Harding," or the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

Liar, cheat, double-crosser—but the world is still listening to him.

For conceivably he may be telling the truth this one time, and on this slim prop rests a possible chance to unravel the Lindbergh mystery.

X X X

Taxpayers are consoled by news today that the state has fired all but two of the capitol thirteen janitors.

Little Rock office-holders hereafter will either sweep out their own quarters, or hire a janitor personally.

Janitors' salaries don't break anybody—but when office-holders are down to doing their own sweeping the public understands that some real economy is in force. Which is all we wanted to know.

X X X

You read-in today's paper that banks and insurance companies representing holders of $1 million dollars' worth of Arkansas' highway and toll bridge bonds have formed a protective association to fight our bond refunding measure.

Dime saving banks, great insurance companies, represent the forces of thrift in America. They protest that they purchased on a 4½ to 5 per cent interest basis can't arbitrarily be cut down to 3-per-cent interest without repudiating Arkansas' credit and honor.

They are right. Our state's sole defense is necessity—and that is all we have ever claimed.

The real dishonor isn't today. It occurred in past years when the Arkansas legislature and the county judges' lobby conspired to defraud the bondholders of their funds and their collateral.

Readers of this paper know all about that, how the judges got 12½ per cent of the bond money from the mortgage guarantee fund, how numerous million dollars all told—and when the mortgage business played out, got one-sixth of the gasoline revenue despite the fact that it was collateral for mortgages already issued.

New Bonus Army Is Ordered Out of First Encampment

Washington Police Pushing Them Back Across Potomac River

U. S. CAMP SPURNED

Bonus Marchers Decline to Use Government Quarters Offered

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Police acted swiftly Wednesday night to prevent repetition of last year's spectacular riot in Washington by ordering evacuation of the first 1933 bonus army camp.

Sharp words passed between bluecoats and leaders of the marchers headed by Harold Foulkrod, when they were told to leave a vacant lot behind the Home Owners building.

Inspector Albert J. Headley notified the veterans they must evacuate within 24 hours because of lack of sanitary facilities.

Heatedly, Mike Thomas of Camden, N. J., told Headley the group could be evicted "but many more are on the way." Thomas was in last year's army which was driven out by federal troops.

In view of camping arrangements provided by the government at Fort Hunt, across the river in Virginia, metropolitan police have followed a course of merely guarding city property and have not interfered with movements of the veterans.

Refuse Camp Facilities

But Foulkrod's election of the army has refused the camp's facilities on the grounds its prospective occupants were Communists.

Foulkrod's followers are disputing leadership of the marchers with a faction headed by the Veterans National Liaison Committee. The administration has agreed with the latter to shelter and feed the veterans for a period at Fort Hunt.

About 150 of Foulkrod's rank and file reached Washington Wednesday morning and went at once to Capitol Hill and there took over the vacant lot.

In anticipation of any attempted demonstration, Capt. S. J. Gnash of the capital police asked for 50 city policemen to reinforce his men.

Foulkrod, legislative officer of last year's movement, sent his men through the Office building to interview representatives and seek their support for immediate payment of the bonus.

No accurate estimate of the number of veterans now in the city was obtainable, although police said they believed about 300 were in the immediate vicinity.

Foulkrod's faction is demanding only payment of the bonus. The Veterans National Relief Committee's program in addition calls for restoration of all pay cuts and reestablishment under the economy act and farm and unemployment relief.

Farmers Week Is Cancelled at A. U.

Economy Necessary—4-H Club Camp to Be Held Separately

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—Plans for Farmers' Week, which was to have been held the first week in August at the University of Arkansas here, will be cancelled, Dean C. Dray, dean of the College of Agriculture of the school announced Wednesday. Budget cuts in the income of the university have made the cancellation necessary, he said.

The 4-H Club camp of the state, which has been held in conjunction with the adult week for the past several years, will be held as an individual event.

Kemper, Kansas City, Mo.; W. W. Reilley, Buffalo, N. Y.; and W. F. Weber, Lake Charles, La.

The board will meet later for organization purposes.

Germany to Step Up War Strength

Geneva Conference Startled by Hitler's Flat Demand

GENEVA, Switzerland—(AP)—Geneva was startled Thursday by a declaration by Foreign Minister von Neurath that whatever the reduction in armaments achieved under the British plan, Germany will be compelled to supplement armaments and increase her arms.

Meanwhile the League of Nations was plunged into special session to consider Paraguay's declaration of war on Bolivia.

Germany Buys Tariff Truce

Must Sweep Out Own Offices in Capitol

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Ordering the capitol janitor force reduced from 12 to 2, Secretary of State Ed McDonald said Thursday that the various state departments must do their own janitor work or pay to have it done until new appropriations become available July 1.

The janitor force was reduced as part of the 36-per-cent appropriation reduction ordered by Governor Futrell.

Third Suspect in Holdup Identified

June Brashear Viewed by Staff of First National Thursday

A third suspect in the $24,000 robbery of the First National Bank here February 23, was identified Thursday by members of the bank staff as June Brashear, alias Louis Jamison, 28.

Brashear was brought to Hope city hall at 11:30 Thursday morning where he and Spencer, Syd McMath, Roy Stephenson and Chester Harwell, members of the bank staff, viewed the suspect and said that Brashear was one of three bandits who entered the bank with drawn pistols.

Brashear was said to have stood guard over the bank employees while Charley Chapman, alleged leader of the gang, went through money cages and the bank vault, sacking the loot in a large cloth bag.

Brashear was arrested in Claremore, Okla., after being traced to Kansas City, parts of Texas, and then into Oklahoma. He was taken to the radio following his arrest in Oklahoma, to face charges of robbing the Stuttgart National Bank of approximately $6000 last January. Brashear was brought to Hope by El Dorado officers Thursday morning.

His Second Arrest

It was the second time that Brashear has been arrested. Three days after the robbery here, Sheriff Maxey and Miller county officers were searching the vicinity of Garland City in an effort to arrest Shorty Crain in connection with the robbery. Brashear was mistaken for Crain by Deputy Sheriff J. C. Pate.

Pate brought the suspect to Hope at that time Chester Harwell said he was "positive" that Brashear was the man who stood over him with a gun with a pistol while the bank was being robbed. Other members of the bank staff at that time said they were not positive concerning Brashear's identity.

Brashear was taken to the city hall and after being questioned by officers was released.

Brashear is the second suspect to be arrested in connection with the daylight robbery of Smackover bank. Charley Chapman, one time wealthy real estate operator believed to be the leader of raid on the Hope bank, is held in connection with the robbery.

It became known last Friday that Chapman had been released from the Union county jail pending his trial for appearance at the June term of Union county circuit court.

Sheriff A. D. Maxey, of Crawford county, who captured Chapman near Van Buren in his home town, Friday after a gun battle in which the alleged bandit was wounded several times, has believed instrumental in bringing about the arrest of Brashear at Claremore, Okla.

Williams Sentenced

Charley Williams, one of the actual bank robbers, pleaded guilty during the April term of Hempstead county court and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. Williams was not known to have participated in the robbery during open court.

Williams was captured in Alexandria, La., a few days following the arrest of Chapman near Van Buren. It was said Sheriff Maxey furnished Louisiana officers information which led to the arrest of Williams at Alexandria.

The Hempstead county grand jury indicted Chapman. But at that time Sheriff Maxey was holding him for the "highest bidder"; Circuit Judge Dexter Bush issued a court order and sent Sheriff John L. Wilson to return Chapman to this county for trial.

Except for the day following the arrest of Chapman Sheriff Maxey remained in Hope. For two days the whereabouts of Maxey and Chapman were not known. Then Sheriff Crawford county sheriff turned up at El Dorado and turned his prisoner over to Union county officers for robbery of the Smackover bank.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska—(AP)—An increasing number of St. Lawrence Island Eskimos have established summer homes equipped with electric lights, radios, phonographs, over-stuffed furniture and modern kitchen appliances.

Winter, however, finds them back in their old fashioned igloo habitations, almost as primitively equipped as before the advent of the first white man.

Means Swears He Knows Kidnapers of Lindbergh Child

Ex-Convict Names Two—Says They Tried to Return Infant

STORY BORNE OUT

Friend of Lindbergh Recalls Seeing Strangers at His Home

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Gaston Means told the jury in District of Columbia Supreme Court Thursday, where he is on trial for conspiracy in connection with the ransom attempt for the Lindbergh baby last year, that the kidnapers made two attempts to deliver the child in Washington on March 8, 1932, a week after the kidnaping.

Naming Wellington Henderson and Irving Fenton as the kidnapers, Means said Henderson told him that they took the baby once to the George town home of Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, a friend of Lindbergh, but delivery was refused.

Henderson, according to Means' testimony, told him that just before this they had sought to deliver the child to the McLean home.

Part of Henderson's story to Means was apparently corroborated by previous testimony given the court by Colonel Guggenheim, who said he caught a glimpse of a man and baby stepping off his front porch into a cab, where a woman was waiting for them.

Names Kidnapers

WASHINGTON— (AP) —Gaston B. Means, testifying in his own defense in the ransom conspiracy trial here said in District of Columbia Supreme Court Thursday that he knew who took the Lindbergh baby, how the child was killed, and who got the $50,000 that Dr. John Condon was paid for returning the infant.

Means said he believed the man is named Irving Fenton, and that there is a possibility that another man named Wellington Henderson had an interest part in the abduction.

They intended at first, he said, to kidnap Colonel Lindbergh, later changing their plans.

Means said he met them while a prisoner in Atlanta penitentiary.

Priest Testifies

WASHINGTON—A Roman Catholic priest, so ill he came to court in a wheel chair, a detective hugging a parcel of diamonds; a defendant cutting out his own lawyers. These are some of the ingredients that went into the making of the trial here Thursday in the District Supreme Court, of Gaston B. Means and Norman T. Whitaker, charged with conspiracy to defraud Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean of $35,000 in connection with the futile plan last year to recover the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

The priest, Father Hurrey was the priest. He came from a sick bed to tell the court how he had been called to Mrs. McLean's home March 6, 1932, to sit in at a conference with her and Means. Means received from her $104,000 with which to ransom the baby he was confident he could recover. Then the priest told of promises which Means, and later Whitaker, had made to Mrs. McLean, for weeks.

He said he had accompanied Mrs. McLean and Means to Mrs. McLean's country home in nearby Maryland where Means had assured them the suspect and said that Brashear was one of three bandits who entered the bank with drawn pistols.

Brashear was said to have stood guard over the bank employees while Charley Chapman, alleged leader of the gang, went through money cages and the bank vault, sacking the loot in a large cloth bag.

Brashear was arrested in Claremore, Okla., after being traced to Kansas City, parts of Texas, and then into Oklahoma. He was taken to the radio following his arrest in Oklahoma, to face charges of robbing the Stuttgart National Bank of approximately $6000 last January. Brashear was brought to Hope by El Dorado officers Thursday morning.

His Second Arrest

It was the second time that Brashear has been arrested. Three days after the robbery here, Sheriff Maxey and Miller county officers were searching the vicinity of Garland City in an effort to arrest Shorty Crain in connection with the robbery. Brashear was mistaken for Crain by Deputy Sheriff J. C. Pate.

Pate brought the suspect to Hope at that time Chester Harwell said he was "positive" that Brashear was the man who stood over him with a gun with a pistol while the bank was being robbed. Other members of the bank staff at that time said they were not positive concerning Brashear's identity.

Brashear was taken to the city hall and after being questioned by officers was released.

Brashear is the second suspect to be arrested in connection with the daylight robbery of Smackover bank. Charley Chapman, one time wealthy real estate operator believed to be the leader of raid on the Hope bank, is held in connection with the robbery.

It became known last Friday that Chapman had been released from the Union county jail pending his trial for appearance at the June term of Union county circuit court.

Sheriff A. D. Maxey, of Crawford county, who captured Chapman near Van Buren in his home town, Friday after a gun battle in which the alleged bandit was wounded several times, is believed instrumental in bringing about the arrest of Brashear at Claremore, Okla.

Williams Sentenced

Charley Williams, one of the actual bank robbers, pleaded guilty during the April term of Hempstead county court and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. Williams was not known to have participated in the robbery during open court.

Williams was captured in Alexandria, La., a few days following the arrest of Chapman near Van Buren. It was said Sheriff Maxey furnished Louisiana officers information which led to the arrest of Williams at Alexandria.

The Hempstead county grand jury indicted Chapman. But at that time Sheriff Maxey was holding him for the "highest bidder"; Circuit Judge Dexter Bush issued a court order and sent Sheriff John L. Wilson to return Chapman to this county for trial.

Except for the day following the arrest of Chapman Sheriff Maxey remained in Hope. For two days the whereabouts of Maxey and Chapman were not known. Then Sheriff Crawford county sheriff turned up at El Dorado and turned his prisoner over to Union county officers for robbery of the Smackover bank.

Doctors Examine 51 Hope Children

Pre-School Clinic Highly Successful, P.-T. A. Reports

The pre-school clinic held at Hope city hall May 5, sponsored by the local P.-T. A., was reported successful.

Each mother cooperated wholeheartedly by accompanying her child. Fifty-one children were examined, several of whom were found to be perfect.

The mothers of Hope, and Miss Flora Cotton, the county health nurse, thanked Doctors Weaver, Martindale, Kolb, Carrigan, Henry and Alexander, for their co-operation in making these examinations and advising adults as to the condition of the children.

Bankers, Insurance Cos' Fight Refund

Protective Association to Attack Arkansas' Program

NEW YORK—(AP)—A committee composed of executives of banks, insurance companies, and investment firms was formed Thursday to represent the holders of 91 million dollars of Arkansas highway and toll bridge bonds.

It is the first protective organization formed to represent holders of state bonds in recent financial history, according to municipal bond authorities.

The committee was formed following the action of Arkansas this week in refunding bonds at lower interest rates.

The committee is headed by William L. DeBoest, president of the Dime Saving bank, of New York.

The Metropolitan and New York Life Insurance companies are represented by Marshall Chilcote and Gal-Shek, Chinese commander-in-chief of the Eighth Route Army, will occur in Peiping and Tientsin."

United States officials "stated they would not heed the warning and would resist the advance to the utmost.

Anti-Trust Move Beaten

WASHINGTON — (AP) — An unsuccessful attempt was made by Democratic insurgents at a secret caucus Wednesday night to put the huge new democratic majority in the senate on record in favor of the anti-trust laws.

The caucus, forced by 29 Democrats led by Representative Shannon of Missouri, broke up after two hours of bitter attacks by the insurgents on the proposed suspension of the anti-trust laws, but not before a resolution was unanimously adopted "expressing confidence in the loyalty and patriotism of President Roosevelt."

Representative Byrns of Tennessee, the Democratic leader, presented the resolution supporting President Roosevelt after the insurgents withdrew resolutions by Representative McFarlane, democrat, Texas, declaring against any relaxation of the anti-trust laws.

McFarlane contended that the farm relief-inflation bill, ready to go to the president for his signature, with the administration's railroad bill and the projected industry control measure would permit relaxation of the anti-trust laws.

He declared this was contrary to the democratic national platform, which says:

We advocate strengthening and impartial enforcement of the anti-trust laws, to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices, and revision thereof for the better protection of labor and the small producer and distributor."

It was established that there were but 130 of the 313 house Democrats in the chamber, or 27 short of a quorum. Representative Parker of Georgia, cited the call for the caucus provided only for discussion of the anti-trust laws and threatened to make a point of order for lack of a quorum unless the resolution was withdrawn.

Jap Plane Drops Notice of Attack

Chinese Prepare Hopeless Defense of Capital City Peiping

PEIPING, China—(AP)—A Japanese bombing plane roared over Peiping Thursday and rained down handbills warning of an immediate attack on the capital of North China.

Chinese anti-aircraft guns opened fire but the plane, at a safe height, completed its mission and flew away.

The handbills, signed by Chinese, failed to "cease opposing the Japanese and Manchukuoans, and refused to accept a way out offered by Chiang Gai-Shek, Chinese commander-in-chief of the Eighth Route Army to occur in Peiping and Tientsin."

United States officials stated they would not heed the warning and would resist the advance to the utmost.

Chinese Concede Defeat

TIENTSIN, China.—Three Japanese brigades accompanied by aerial bombers have crossed the Luan river in North China, beyond the large triangle they declared they would make their farthest point, and Wednesday were sweeping rapidly southwestward in the direction of Peiping.

The relaxing of Chinese censorship in Tientsin and Peiping when the editors to be keenly alive to the probability that the major Japanese aim is to capture the capital and undermine Chinese morale by creating fear among the populace.

Gen. Ho Chu-Kuo, war minister, is commander in North China, directing the present operations as being unprecedented in size and fury in the Sino-Japanese conflict and expresses the conviction that the Japanese fully intend to smash the loyalist armies in North China and then, with the disorganized troops left wavering, to establish an independent pro-Manchukuo regime. General Ho declares the Chinese have not given up hope of the scheme, but is convinced the Japanese army will use force to compel it, if it may be necessary to enable the anti-Nanking elements to establish their own government.

Telephone advices from Peiping report that the main assault through Miyun was scheduled to begin Thursday.

General Ho, conceding the inevitability of Shinese defeat and fearing that sieged Chinese troops from entering southward may create disorders and attempt looting, announced that when Miyun falls he will close Peiping's gates. He is already mounting machine guns on the city walls and digging a vast semicircle of trenches a few miles north of the city, where machine gunners will, if necessary, fire upon the retreating Chinese forces to defend them and prevent looting in Peiping.

Seasonal Civilization

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—(AP)—Plans for a chain of coin-operated telescopes to be placed in strategic positions throughout the country are being made by a company here. Thousands have used the telescopes on the Empire State building tower in New York city, the company says, the instruments have paid their cost in less than two months.

Prosperity Club Nears Final Lap

Competition for $180 in Prizes Ends Week From Saturday

Interest in the Prosperity club has increased the past few days with the contest for distribution of $180 in cash ending one week from Saturday night.

Several stores which had been out of the contest have secured a booth and now every firm that is a member of the Prosperity club can give votes to those who purchase merchandise on accounts. Supporters of various contestants entered in the race are asked to call for their votes. Firms are only too glad to give votes, if they know the customers want them.

Special offers are being announced in the advertising columns of Hope Star whereby contestants may secure free votes, in addition to those given with purchases, with a little effort and co-operation on the part of members of the Prosperity club and the organization. Several are offered today. Others will appear later.

The new standing will be announced in tomorrow's paper. Votes will be counted three times each week, the next one being the day Monday, Wednesday and Friday.
